Berlin. May 30.—Count Zeppelin, whose remarkable performance in his first airship brought unbounded honors to the inventor, today accomplished the most striking feat in his carreer. He guided his Zeppelin II. from Friedrichshafen to Bitterfeid, a distance of more than 468 miles, without landing. The journey lasted nearly twenty-two hours, and, so far as is known tonight, Count Zeppelin is still in the alt, on the return journey to Friedrichshafen.

and then a card was thrown out, stating that a great amount of water and benzine had been used than was expected, and that the craft would descend to the surface of Lake Dutzenteich, to replenish the water supply. This, however, was not carried out. Was Expected to Land at Berlin. It was announced and widely distributed in special editions of the newspapers that the count would come to Berlin and land at the Tempelhof parade ground. Hundreds of thousands gathered there this afternoon. The emperor and empress, several of the princes and the leading military officials and officers were present and towards evening searchlights were set to work in anticipation of the approach of the airship. Soldiers kept an enormous space clear, until half past ten c'clock at night, when a despatch from Ritterfeld announced that the airship was returning to the starting point at Friedrichshafen, which caused the most intense disappointment. was returning to the starting point at Friedrichshafen, which caused the most intense disappointment.

The voyage began under rather unfaverable conditions. There was a lowering sky, rain, clouds and a strong side wind when the girship left the fionting hall shortly after nine o'clock last night.

Early in the morning the people of Treuchtlingen, a small city in central Eavaria, were awakened by the noise of the propellers of the craft, which was passing slowly at a low altitude. At this place the count dropped out a card, divulging his intention to proceed further north. This was the first occasion he had journeyed over Bavaria and his arrival an hour and a half later at Nuremburg caused the greatest surprise to thousands of pleasure seekers who were preparing for the holiday excursions.

The ship manoeuvred over the city wate despatches that the airship was approaching and so informed the emperor and princes. Orders were given to prepare a space in the Tempelhof field. This was surrounded by lines of police and troops and virtually the entire population of the capital swarmed thither and waited on tiptoe of expectation until long after dark. Then a special newspaper despatch spread the depressing news of the airship's return. The crowds at first refused to give credence to this report, but finally dispersed. CATHOLIC CLERGY FROM ALL PARTS OF CONNECTICUT

At Laying of Cornestone of New St Joseph's Church, New London.

Joseph's Church, New London.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, May 20.—Many from Norwich were in the multitude assembled in Montauk avenue Sunday aftermon to witness the ceremony of the laying of the cornerstone of the new St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, it being the largest demonstration of Catholics ever seen in New London.

Prior to the ceremony there was a parade of all the Catholic societies in the city, headed by the Eleventh Artillery band from Fort Wright, and with the board of aldermen in carriages. The parade passed St. Mary's church and rectory, in respect to Rev. Thomas P. Joynt who was too ill to participate, but was seated on the porch of the rectory. As the paraders passed they lifted their hats and the band played Adeste Fideles in respect to the popular priest who has guided the Catholic church affairs in New London for the past 26 years. There were selections by the band and singing by the church choir prior to the cornerstone laying by Rt. Rev. Mgh. John T. Synnott with the usual imposing ceremony. About 3,000 were present.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. Francis E. May, a native New London young priest, now assigned to the Apostolic missionary band of the diocese, and stationed in Milford.

At the conclusion of Father May's sermon, Rt. Rev. Mgh. Synnott spoke briefly in endorsement of the words spoken by Father May and congratulated the people on the good work they had done.

Instead of landing, the count put his craft through a series of manocuvres for half an hour, coming at times comparatively close to the tops of the buildings. He then went on, crossing Halle to Bitterfeld. No time was wasted there, and to everybody's surprise the airship, after describing a great circle, turned again and sailed to the south.

In the meantime, the military authorities at Berlin were absolutely without advices as to the count's plans. Major Gross, commander of the army halloon corps, said that no arrangements had been made for the landing of the airship at Tegel, the military balloon headquarters. The local authorities, however, learned from private despatches that the airship was approaching and so informed the emlated the people on the good work they had done.
